Social Security Information For Farmers

Not long ago a farmer, whom we shall call Mr. Jones, visited the local Social Security office. Mr. Jones had been a farmer for many years. Unfortunately, he recently had become unable to farm because of a serious illness.

Mr. Jones had heard that disability benefits were payable under the Social Security law and he wanted to know whether or not he was eligible. The Social Security representative explained the eligibility requirements. He pointed out that to receive disability benefits, a person must have a condition that makes him unable to do any kind of substantial work and the condition must be long lasting. Mr. Jones felt that his condition was so severe that he would qualify.

The Social Security representative went on to explain that disability benefits are payable only if the person's disability is he must have at least five years of work out of the ten years before he becomes disabled.

Mr. Jones asked if farming counted for social security credit. The representative explained that farming does count if a tax return is filed and the social security taxes paid each year. He asked the farmer if his had been done. Mr. Jones explained that he had never paid any social security taxes on his farm earnings, but he said he still had his farm records and would be quite willing to file tax returns" so that he could draw benefits.

The Social Security representative then explained to Mr. Jones the statute of limitations and how it affects the filing of tax returns. Under this law, a self-employed person (including farmers, store owners, or anyone else in business for themselves) has three years, three months and 15 days after the year in which income is earned to file his self-employment tax returns and report this net income for social security credit. A self-employed person can never get social security credit for any year in which less a tax return is filed and the social security taxes are paid on the income for that year.

After this had been explained, Mr. Jones realized that because he had never paid any social security taxes, he could get credit for only those years in which he needed five years to qualify for disability, there was no way he could meet this requirement.

To protect their rights and the rights of their families to social security benefits, farmers must file timely tax returns each year. Some years there may be very little or no net income from a farm. If that is the case and you have gross farm income of $600 or more you may use the optional method to report your farm earnings by taking two-thirds of your gross. If gross income is $1600 or more you must use $1200 as net income for social security purposes.

Those who desire more information about the Social Security law and how farmers are affected by it, may write, call or visit their local social security office and ask for OASI-864.

Pastor Speaks

Pastor Says

HEALTH is a complete state of well - being, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. Sanitation is a philosophy of life; for our concept of life must include health if it is to be complete.

When a person has good health more is involved than just physical well - being. Some of the physically healthy people have relatively poor health because the rest of life is not in balance.

Some time ago one of the nationally all - time great athletes died a rather tragic death because of poor health. He was the epitome of physical health but he couldn't handle narcotics. A victim of violent depression, being unable to handle the tensions, he came to a tragic end of life.

The physical well - being, to have health means more than just the physical. Some of the healthiest people I have known have been those of frail bodies. Acts, chapter three, records a case in point. As Simon Peter and John were making their way to the temple for prayer and worship, they came upon a man who had been put there to receive alms - acts of mercy and kindness including money. This man gazed upon Peter and John, expecting to receive something from them. They had quite a reputation and perhaps this man thought, "I'll get a good catch from them."

Sometime ago a man came to my study asking for help. When he became aware that the kind of help he was seeking — money — would not be given, he became rather belligerent saying, "What does the church exist for if not to help people in need?"

To this I had to say, "your attitude reveals that you are only concerned about the physical". What is this is important, and the church does include a ministry in this area, but the conditions of the other areas of life are important to health also. I noticed my visitor became restless when I honestly sought to help him relate his life to Christ.

Simon Peter said to the man at Gate Beautiful, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I unto thee, in the name of Jesus Christ, walk". Perhaps we may not be as bold in our faith as Simon was, but we surely can "share of that which we have."

Oft times this will bring healin to us as well as others. A word of encouragement, rebuke in love, challenge or understanding will give hope and new life to others. Their health will be improved or restored. When we look at the results of this happening in Acts three, we find the people puzzled and confounded, but we see the lame man praising God and worshipping him in the midst of the people. This is an indication to me that his health was improved. To have contact with Christ always helps us in any need.

Be found in your place of worship each Lord's Day, and find help, strength, and health in Worship. Don't forget to take your family with you.

Mrs. Clayton Beale and son, Barry, visited relatives in Prospect Friday.

Mrs. Joseph Meadows and her two daughters, Mrs. Robert Lewis, of Hatboro, Penn. and Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards and their children, of Anchorage visited in the Beale home Thursday.

The Piney Ridge Birthday Club celebrated Mrs. Ethel Busbey's birthday on Thursday, June 27. There were seven members present for the happy occasion to wish her many returns of the day.

Mrs. R. H. Fore visited Mrs. Linford Cumby and Mrs. Eunice Baldwin Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Cumby has been on the sick list for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Baldwin spent their vacation visiting their children. On June 29, Saturday they left for Christiansburg and were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hancock and family until Tuesday. From there they went to Raleigh, N.C. and visited with Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Baldwin and family. On their return home they stopped by Danville for a brief visit with Mr. and Mrs. Rosser Baldwin and arrived here last Friday afternoon.

Supper guests of Mrs. Green Garrett on Friday night were Mr and Mrs. N. H. Roach, Mr. and Mrs. Geryle Fonty and sons, of Vinton; Mr. and Mrs. James Blackwell, Jr. and son, James Allen. Later callers were Mr. and Mrs. Onley Ryan, Miss Mary Garrison, Mrs. Berta Garrison, of Lynchburg; also Mr. and Mrs. Dinelo Garrett and Peggy, Mr. Kermit Garrett and son, Junior, of Lynchburg recently visited his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Bascom Williams and sons, Jimmy and Emmett, of Richmond spent the week end here with the former's sister, Miss Flora Belle Williams and other relatives.

One would have to be blind not to be able to see that Pamplin City is thriving, for it is plain as can be what with the new bank and Fire House well underway—and the new Pulcher home nearing completion they say. Just two doors up such hammering and nailing: the reason you see Mr. Caldwell's 'Home Remodeling Project' has just begun and all of this spells prosperity.

Over the week end visitors in the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. H. McCall were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ramsey and children, of Goldsboro, N.C. Jane Ramsey is spending the week here. Monday morning callers were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Briggs and son and daughter, of Falls Church.

Corvair 700 Club Coupe

The hardest part about parking a Corvair is finding a nick

That may be a slight overstatement, but such jauntiness comes easily when you're a Corvair owner.

And you can usually back it up—as easily as you can buck up a Corvair. You'll find yourself doing that occasionally, if only to adjust the brakes—they're self-adjusting. That's all there is to it, and that's a good example of how delightfully easy Corvair is to own, drive and maintain.

But since we began by talking about driving, let's stick with that awhile. A large factor in the fun of driving a Corvair is the location of its engine in the rear. Why the rear? It gives Corvair extra traction on any road surface. It provides a nearly flat floor and more useable interior space. Best of all, it puts steering so light, so responsive, you wonder why no other American car thought of it.

Corvair's engine is also air cooled, which might add, which means there's no freeze or water for you to add. Ever.

All that pleasure from something as practical almost makes you think Corvair is unique among American cars. It isn't surprising, because it is!

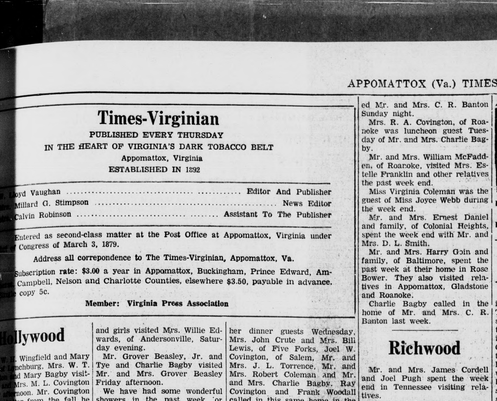
Banker Discusses Rural Electric Program With Director



F. M. Newsom, Jr. O. S. Williams

...Become One of Farmers' Greatest Assets

...electrification played its ...during World War II ...cause of it property ...l America became ...farmers' greatest as-

...F. M. Newsom, Jr., ...ent of the Farmers ...k Bank of Lawrence...he talked with O. ... also of Lawrence...long-time Director of ...Electric Coopera-

...farms in Brunswick ...electricity and most ...it from member-...of rural electric co-...About one-half of ...County is served by ...electric Cooperative," ...said as he talked ...newsom ...injected Mr. New-...you know one of the ...sticks in my mind about this rural electricity—the change it brought about in property values . . ."

"In my profession as a banker, I always look at values. I guess, and one of the greatest contributions to the rural people here in Southside Virginia came from your rural electric system for it made rural property really worth more . . . it just doubled in some instances, the value of farm land."

We Want Opinions

"I knew you would take a banker's viewpoint." Mr. Williams said, "and that's exactly why I'm talking with you about our rural electric program. We want to know if we are meeting the requirements for a good job for the people of our area, and if we are not doing a good job, we want to know why and try to take advantage of any suggestions you might have."

"I don't have any suggestions," Mr. Newsom said, "for the job you are doing is reflected all over the County—as a matter of fact, all over America. I can remember the labor problems we had during World War II, however, through the availability of electricity then, due mostly to your program, we were able to produce the food needed for our boys overseas. Most certainly, rural electricity was a dominant factor in winning World War II."

Good Economic Effect

Continuing, Mr. Newsom said: "There was an economic effect, and a good one, right from the beginning of the program . . . applicants for bank loans found themselves in a stronger credit position with electricity on their farms . . . farm operation became more efficient . . . a bit of leisure was possible for rural people . . .

"Had it not been for the rural electric program, it would, no doubt, have been a long time before our farmers would have had electricity . . . but there's plenty of room for both the electric cooperatives and the commercial power company . . . this is a big country and the total electric industry is responsible for it being both big and progressive . . . the Southside Electric has 482 miles of lines in Brunswick County with nearly 1,354 members. The system serves rural people in 18 Southside Virginia counties where there are over 4,400 miles of lines and over 16,500 members. Mr. Williams is one of ten Directors, elected by these members to operate this $12-million dollar business enterprise here in Southside Virginia.

Image Of God

Lesson for July 14, 1963

God created man in His w i m a g e, in His own likeness. That is the declaration of Genesis, in the very first chapter of the Bible. It is such an astonishing statement that many, even Christians have been unable to believe it. There is no space here to tell of the ways in which this great declaration has been made to appear to say something else than what it does say: namely, that God and man have a common likeness, a resemblance. This does not mean that man is an exact reproduction of God on a small scale. It does mean, taken at face value, that man resembles God in ways that no other creatures do.

What Happened to Image?

Someone will ask: But what about sin? Was there anything left of the image of God after mankind fell into sin? Here Christians, and even churches, have long differed. Some say: The image is there, clear as ever. Others say: The image (resemblance to God) has been totally destroyed by sin. There is a third view in between these, which is held by many churches, and which seems to this writer to be closest to the Bible and to facts of experience. That is, the image of God has been marred and defaced, but it is still there. This view of the matter is expressed in an old gospel song: "Down in the human heart, crushed by the tempter, Feelings lie buried that Grace can restore."

Like God in Mind

One way in which we are a kind of likeness of God is in our minds. A great scientist of a past century spoke of his discoveries as "thinking God's thoughts after him." The mind of God planned this universe; and if our minds were also, likely unlike His, we could no more appreciate this universe, we could no more discover its laws, than a turtle can. So far as we know how the world is made, so far as we discover the properties of newer elements and materials, we are thinking after God the thoughts He had in creation. Had you ever stopped to think what a dull world this would be if we had to look at it from a turtle's eyes and a turtle's brain? If you have any sense you would not exchange places with the most intelligent horse or dog that ever lived, because in doing so you would lose your most precious possession next to life itself: your human mind.

The Voice of Conscience

John Calvin, a famous theologian who could be very plain when he tried, gave us a helpful hint about the image of God. It means all those qualities in man, he said, which mark us off from other animals. Now one of these qualities is what we call Conscience. This is a word for the ability which human beings have, to look at things and actions not only as pleasant or unpleasant, legal or illegal, approved or disapproved, but as RIGHT or WRONG. Nature — birds and bees and tigers and buzzards — does not know anything about right and wrong. Nature-creatures do what comes naturally, they know nothing else, because they do not bear the image of God. But man's ability to be aware of right and wrong—and not only that, but to stand for the right even if he suffers and dies for it—this is part of what his likeness to God means.

The Love of Beauty

Again, one thing that sets us off from other creatures and marks a resemblance to God, is something often forgotten: namely, the joy we have in what is beautiful. Animals are sensitive to simple beauties such as color; but you never saw a dog that would leave his bone to look at a sunset, nor a cat that would eat more happily if a bowl of violets were put down by her catfood. It is only human beings who want flowers on the table, or who will rise from a meal to look at a sunset. God made the world beautiful, and it was beautiful long before men lived on this planet. But now whenever beauty touches our hearts, whenever we thrill to beauty in nature or in art, we are sharing the joy of God. The reader is invited to think this out farther; these that have been mentioned are not the only ways in which we bear the image of God. We can come to Him, not as to a stranger!
